#SpreadLove

Alfie Sees Love is a children's book about a fun-loving rhinoceros with albinism who likes to go on adventures, celebrate differences, and spread love all around.

About the author

Alison works in Corporate Communications in her hometown of Memphis, TN. She's always enjoyed creative writing, and when both of her boys were born with special needs, she combined her love for storytelling with her passion for disability advocacy, and Alfie Sees Love was born! Through Alfie Sees Love, Alison hopes to normalize differences, teach empathy, and promote inclusion. When she's not creating rhymes or making puns, Alison enjoys spending time with her husband Russell and their two sons, Russ and Peyton. Alison holds an M.Ed. in Leadership and Organizational Performance and B.S. in Human and Organizational Development from Vanderbilt University.

About the artist

Meghean is an acrylic artist in Memphis, Tennessee, where she lives with her husband and three kids. She attended Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Texas, where she received her BFA in Theater Studies. She spent her early twenties designing costumes and large sets, which inspired her love for large canvases. She went on to teach elementary art, but after the arrival of her third child she made the leap to pursue painting as a full time career. She currently paints out of her garage studio, where her kid's bikes and scooters often make an appearance along with the occasional neighbor kid. She is inspired by Memphis, God's glorious creation, and the wonderful people in her city!
